

PEACE, LOVE

AND SAUSAGE

The sign at Woodstock read, "MAKE SAUSAGE NOT WAR."

We hear you, man.

The companies of your local Cylindrical Meats Council have been producing sausage and other fine cylindrical meats for generations. Wars may come and go, but the tasty goodness of a fine bratwurst or red hot transcends any conflict. Or, as we like to say, "Spread the love with a little wiener."

You see, cylindrical meat brings people together. Whether it's a backyard barbeque, rock festival, or peace summit, some hot and tasty cylindrical meat will put a smile on everyone's face.

Peace. It isn't easy to achieve. Love. It isn't universal, as much as we'd like it to be. But maybe, just maybe, if you sit some people down at a table and serve up some kielbasa, they'll start talking. If not about peace, at least about how great the food is.

And that's a start.
